| Course Description  | Financial ethics introduces the moral requirements to do business in the financial industry. The course includes the code of behaviors, and for each article, there are examples and cases introduced to demonstrate what is not followed. As a result, students should improve their recognition of social responsibility. In addition, by taking this course, they should identify potential risks of unethical behaviors toward themselves, their clients, and employers. Finally, the cases from the material are closely related to financial markets and financial institutions, which would help students to review some of the knowledge of products and services rendered by different financial institutions. |
| Class plan based on courseevaluation from previousacademic year         | The course contents and class delivery methods are reconsidered and modified to reflect the feedback from students.   |
| Course related to the instructor's practical experience (Summary of experience) | Any person working in the financial industry should be well educated on what is the right thing to do in order to put your client's interest as the top priority before you seek to meet your own interest. Also, all financial firms require their employee to study financial ethics and keep a high ethical standard.  |
| Learning Goals  | After completing the course, students should be able to: 1. Understand the code of ethics and the appropriate behaviors. 2. Review and become familiar with the services and products rendered by different types of financial institutions. 3. Demonstrate an understanding of the correct solution when unsure about breaking the code of ethics. 4. Be able to correctly handle the conflict of interest between yourself, clients, and your employer.   |
